The children in Willow, Oak and Beech classes visited the Ashmolean Museum on Friday, and took part in guided teaching sessions.

An extract from Ella's account:

The first painting I looked at was called The Hunt in the Forest. In this painting I looked at perspective. It is the oldest painting in the whole museum! The most interesting part was that the artist made paint out of egg yolk! The painting is about lots of humans and animals hunting deer! I could see that the artist used lots of bright colours to help the painting come alive.

[Later] I really enjoyed making a postcard. It made me feel focused and happy.

In other news

The transformed outdoor classroom is now in daily use, giving opportunities for outdoor learning. As with all transformations, it is lovely to look at "before" and "after" pictures. £6000 raised by parents and donated has enabled us to complete this priority on our 'outdoor environment strategy'. Thank You
